CIRCLE

—He who envies the happiness of others will never be happy.

—Everything comes to the man who waits—and the bill collector heads the procession.

—The letter carrier expects every one on his route to take things as they come.

—The proudest moment in a successful man's life is when he tells how he got there.

—One reason a woman can't keep secrets is because she doesn't know what to do with them.

—Unless a man has scored at least one failure he is unable to appreciate success.

—Fewer persons were killed in highway grade crossing accidents in 1927 and 1926. The number of accidents was also less. The number killed in 1927 was 2,371, fewer than in 1926, by 120, while 6,613 persons were injured, a reduction of 378 below the preceding year.

—Foreign trade in the United States in March showed a big increase over the preceding month in both exports and imports, the former total being $428,000,000 against $371,546,900 in February and the latter $382,000,000 against $350,973,000. Exports for the month were approximately $14,000,000 greater than those for March, 1927, while imports showed an increase approximately $4,000,000.

—A robin has built a nest on the fire escape of the High-st school building.

From all indications the robin family worked very industriously over the week-end to build its little home and had evidently not counted on disturbance as the nest is on the top step of the fire escape that leads from the fifth grade room. The noise that children make in the playground, however, has not disturbed the mother robin and already there is a small blue egg in her nest.

The pupils of the fifth grade have painted a sign which they placed on the door leading to the fire escape that reads "Keep out." Precautions have been made in the school room to make as little noise as possible so as not to frighten the robin family away.

DECLARES HOOVER
CAN'T CARRY OHIO

MARION, O., April 27.—Fred W. Warner, state Republican chairman, today expressed the opinion that Herbert Hoover will face "considerable opposition" in the rural sections of Ohio, in case he is the party's presidential nominee.

Warner pointed out that opposition to Hoover, expressed in the vote for Willis delegates at Tuesday's primary, is likely to carry through to the general election.

"The Anti-Hoover district delegates carried 65 of the 82 counties and split with the Hoover delegates in seven counties," he said. "Virtually all the counties in which the Willis delegates received majorities were rural, the Hoover delegates winning in the large city counties and a few of the rural counties."

He intimated that Hoover forces could not carry the state in a general election.

TWO FIREMEN KILLED
PATERSON, N. J., April 27.—Two firemen were killed and twelve injured today in a fire in Lynn's department store building here when an explosion caused a floor to collapse. One of the dead firemen's body was recovered. The dead firemen were Marinus Baker and Edward Tribe.

TORNADO HITS JACKSON
JACKSON, MISS., April 27.—A terrific tornado tore through Jackson shortly last midnight, sweeping westward towards Vicksburg. Property damage will run into thousands of dollars in Jackson alone. Trees were uprooted and houses unroofed in the suburbs.

NATION PAYS TRIBUTE TO BENNETT

CIRCLEVILLE WOMAN
FIGHTS OFF INTRUDER

A burglar was put to rout Thursday night at 10:15 by Mrs. Henry Rothman at her home at 203 South Pickaway-st after a struggle that lasted some minutes. Her screams aroused neighbors and they hurried to the scene but the attacker had already fled.

Mrs. Rothman had turned on the garage lights from the back porch of her house and had gone into the garage. Suddenly the lights of the garage went out and Mrs. Rothman, presuming that the lights of the entire town had been shut off, walked out.

The man was waiting in the shadows of the building and as Mrs. Rothman stepped out of the door he seized her by the throat and in the struggle that followed Mrs. Rothman became weak and slipped to the ground. By that time the neighbors had been aroused and the man was frightened away.

It is assumed that the man had watched Mrs. Rothman turn on the garage lights from the back porch of her house and after she had entered the garage had pulled the switch off and ran down to the building.

Two bricks were found under one of the windows of the house and a screen had been cut as if in an attempt to unlock the window.

Mrs. Rothman has not suffered greatly from the shock.

She said the man who accosted her was of medium height and had a heavy beard. He wore a cap and was clad in a "coverall" jumper.

"GIVE FARMERS SHARE OF PROSPERITY," TRUAX URGES

STUEBENVILLE, O., April 27.—"Give the farmer a share of the prosperity this country boasts of" was the plea of Director of Agriculture Charles V. Truax, in a speech before the chamber of commerce here last evening. This was Truax's first public appearance following the announcement that he was a Democratic candidate for the United States senate from Ohio.

The trend of Truax's talk showed that the director of agriculture was in hearty favor for the McNary-Haugen bill, now pending before congress, as the most sound basis for farm relief.

"A restoration of agriculture prosperity will benefit labor as much as it will the farmer himself," Truax declared.

"Labor is suffering from the effects of the agriculture depression," Truax continued. Quoting Edgar Wallace, legislative representative of the American Federation of Labor, the director of agriculture said, "Forty per cent of the workers are idle today and the condition is growing worse. Give the farmers more money for their products and they will buy more of the labor output and keep more workers busy."

"Unless farmers are aided more, industrial workers will be thrown out of employment. The nation needs a supply of farm crops because this surplus represents the workers and the country's margin of safety, but this surplus should be handled in such a way that it will not be a menace to producers.

The McNary-Haugen bill, Truax concluded, proposes the best means offered of controlling farm surpluses."

PASSAGE OF McNARY-HAUGEN
BILL IS CONSIDERED CERTAIN

WASHINGTON, April 27.—With passage of the McNary-Haugen farm bill regarded as a foregone conclusion, it appeared today that the agricultural relief policies of the Coolidge administration would be sponsored by Democrats.

Rep. Aswell (D) of Louisiana and Rep. Crisp (D) of Georgia, both prepared to offer substitute bills which are closely akin to the relief measures proposed by Secretary of Agriculture Jardine.

"The house is going to get three chances to vote upon the principles of my own bill," said Rep. Aswell. "It will be offered as a substitute for the Haugen bill as soon as general debate ends. If that fails I will move to strike out the equalization fee and finally, if necessary to recommit the bill."

"The bill which I will offer is

UNEARTH $9,000 IN
GANGSTER'S HOME

CHICAGO, April 27.—Two machine guns, several shotguns, ten sticks of dynamite with caps and fuses, several bombs, $9,000 in cash, and hundreds of rounds of ammunition were seized by federal agents at the home of "Limping Charley" Cleaver, indicted as leader of the $103,000 Grand Trunk train holdup at Evergreen Park last February.

The raid, staged yesterday, was announced by federal authorities today. The cache, revealed by a woman, had been built into the Cleaver home. In another secret hiding place in the Cleaver barn was discovered a quantity of dynamite.

Cleaver is one of five men under indictment for holding up a pay train, blasting a mail coach after shelling two railroad clerks, and escaping with loot of $132,000.

THRAU KILL NEAR DEATH

The condition of Attorney M. E. Thraukill, of Columbus, who has been ill at his home since last Sunday, became critical Thursday morning, when he suffered a cerebral hemorrhage. He collapsed Sunday when he returned from a visit to his farm near Commercial Point, this county. Advises from his brothers' home at that place say his condition is critical. Mr. Thraukill is well known in this city. He has two brothers and three sisters living.

Bremen Fliers Start
for Bennett Funeral;
Landed in New York

(BULLETIN)

NEW YORK, April 27.—The Bremen fliers landed at Curtis field at 1:30 p. m., today to refuel and then proceeded to Washington for the funeral of Floyd Bennett.

LAKE ST. AGNES, QUE., April 27.—The triumphal trans-Atlantic journey of the Bremen's fliers turned to a mission of sadness today when they hopped off for Washington in the Ford relief plane to attend the funeral of a fellow hero of the air—Floyd Bennett.

The plane got away at 7:10 o'clock, conveyed by a swift Fairchild airplane piloted by another trans-Atlantic flyer, Clarence Chamberlin.

Berni Balchen, still another trans-Atlantic airman, was at the controls of the Ford. He was accompanied by Baron Von Huenfeld, Capt. Herman Koehl, pilot of the Bremen; Major James E. Fitzmaurice, the Irish member of the Bremen's crew, and Miss Herta Junkers, whose father designed the Bremen.

After a run of about 1,000 feet the Ford took the air easily. It began to climb at once, meanwhile traveling in a westerly direction. It climbed steadily, clearing the mountains to the west of the lake. Soon it was lost to view, but in five minutes it re-appeared and circled over the airfield apparently waiting for Chamberlin to hop off. Then Balchen swung to the south flying at an altitude of about 2,000 feet.

Mechanics started the motor of the Fairchild and the Ford came swinging back again "loafing" overhead while its escort was started down the runway. In a few minutes Chamberlin took off easily and gracefully and both planes sped southward and quickly were quickly out of sight.

The Ford plane is expected to reach Washington at about 3 o'clock this afternoon. It was announced that it would make one stop enroute to refuel, but the place where the stop would be made was not revealed because the fliers do not wish to be slowed up on their trip by welcoming crowds.

PICKAWAY-TWP.
PUPILS ON VISIT TO OBSERVATORY

About sixty Pickaway-twp. school pupils and friends enjoyed a trip by motor buses to Delaware and Perkins observatory Thursday. After visiting and sightseeing in Delaware, the group prepared their lunch on the banks of the Olentangy.

At dusk they were taken to the new observatory where they were shown slides and given a lecture on observatories and the moon. Following the lecture they were taken up in the dome and were permitted to see the moon in first quarter.

Friends of the pupils who were on the trip were: L. H. Hampshire, Orwell Barr, Harold Pontius, Mr. and Mrs. Shirley Dreisbach, Mrs. Carl E. Doeber, Marvin Dumm, Mrs. B. W. Young, Roger Jure, Miss Mildred Shaner, Miss Pearl Ringwald, Miss Mildred Wertman, Paul Justus, Miss Sarah Swearingen, Miss Mary Radcliffe, Miss Eleanor Pierce and Robert Waples.

COLLEGE AGENT
SPEAKS AT H. S.

G. M. Bingham of Wilmington, O., field agent for Wilmington college, was the speaker at chapel Thursday morning at the Circleville high school auditorium. He lectured to assembly of high school pupils on "Looking Ahead in Their Lives."

"You are here today, but where will you be 10 years from now?" Mr. Bingham asked.

He said that each one would be just what he had wanted to be; that it would depend upon his ability, reliability and even his ego.

As a suggestion, the speaker told every boy and girl to go home and write their name in the Bible or some other valuable book, and to write the date, and after it "What shall I be 10 years from now?" Then after that length of time has passed, the book will be opened, and the person can judge for himself if he has made a good start toward the goal he has been striving for.

POKER PARTY ROBBED

NEW YORK, April 27.—Five armed bandits entered the entrance to the tenth floor apartment of Mrs. Sadie Davis early today, interrupted a poker game and robbed Mrs. Davis, her four women and five men friends of $3,000 in cash and $25,000 worth of jewelry. The robbers fled in a sedan.

BANDITS KILL
7000 IN CHINA

SHANGHAI, April 27.—More than 7,000 persons have been slaughtered by a great bandit horde in the region of Kingmen, according to advices reaching here today.

Persons of all ages—including many women and children—were reported to have been victims of the bandit attack.

Heavy property loss was reported.

Many in the bandit horde were believed to be deserters from the army who without provisions had escaped and were in need of food.

The great bandit group was reported to have sacked the city, causing considerable damage of property, in addition to killing the thousands of victims.

The scene of the bandit attack was believed to be in Shantung province where the Nationalist and Northern armies have been engaged in a vigorous civil strife for the past few weeks.

The Nationalists have made rapid inroads on Shantung and there have been numerous reports of desertions from the Northern forces.

LONDON, April 27.—Seven hundred Japanese troops today were reported moving inward from Tientsin towards Tsinan in Shantung province of China where considerable looting by bandits has been reported. The Shanghai correspondent of the Daily Mail said today.

REP. MADDEN DEAD

WASHINGTON, April 27.—Representative Martin B. Madden of Illinois, for many years Republican leader of the house, died today at his residence in Washington after a long illness.

Madden apparently had been in poor health and was suffering from a long illness.

He was 62 years of age.

He was a member of the House of Representatives for 12 years.

NEW YORK PAUSES
TO PAY RESPECTS
TO DEAD AIR HERO

New York, April 27.—On an army caisson draped with the stars and stripes, the body of Floyd Bennett was borne through the streets here today from the Grand Central depot to the Seventy-first regiment armory. There, for one hour, the people of his home town—men, women and children—filed slowly past the flag-draped bier, paying a last sad tribute to the memory of the famous navy aviator.

The body, en route from Quebec, where Bennett died on Wednesday from pneumonia, for Washington, D. C., arrived at 7:30 o'clock Friday morning. Burial, with high military and naval honors, is to take place this afternoon at the Arlington National cemetery where so many of the nation's heroes have been laid to rest.

And while the funeral procession was being halted for New York City's homage, the three men for whom Bennett died—Fitzmaurice, Koehl and Von Huenfeld, were whirling overhead for Washington to attend the funeral. They hopped off from Lake St. Agnes, Quebec, at 7:10 a. m. Friday.

Widow on Train

Bennett's body arrived on a special car. Aboard the train was the grief-stricken widow, Mrs. Cora Bennett, and the dead flier's bosom friend, Commander Richard E. Byrd.

Byrd, who Bennett achieved his greatest fame—a flight to the North Pole.

Thousands of people crowded into the Grand Central and lined the streets from the depot to the armory. It was a silent, reverent throng, and the authorities experienced no difficulty maintaining order. Squads of mounted police patrolled the streets, and 500 uniformed policemen were on duty in the railroad station.

The funeral procession moved slowly from the depot to the armory. On each side of the army caisson which bore the body marched eight armed soldiers and eight armed sailors in uniform. They were followed by one full company of the Seventy-first Regiment, National Guard, a company of the Sixteenth Infantry and about fifty uniformed sailors from the Brooklyn navy yard. Representing the city of New York was Governor Whalen, head of the mayor's reception committee to distinguished guests.

Mrs. Bennett and Byrd left immediately for the Biltmore hotel where they were to remain until after the public paid its respects at the armory. At 9 o'clock, the doors of the armory were barred to the public and the room in which the coffin lay was reserved for a private service attended by the aviator's relatives and close friends.

Spectators 50 Deep

Park avenue was black with people as the funeral procession slowly wended its way to the armory. The spectators were twenty deep back of the curbstones, and hundreds viewed the procession from windows of the buildings along the route. The mournful music of the Sixteenth Infantry band accentuated the sadness of the occasion.

Four seaplanes from the Rockaway Point naval air station dropped floral tributes over the procession. Flags which would have greeted Bennett if he had lived to pilot the Bremen fliers back from Greenland Island were also laid out throughout the city.

A few minutes after 8 o'clock the caisson arrived at the armory. The body was taken to the private room of Col. Walter Allen De Luster, commanding officer of the Seventy-first Regiment National Guard. The caisson was decorated with flowers from many friends, a particularly large bouquet having been sent by the mayor's committee. Then the public was admitted.

Unending Procession

The caisson, played upon a catafalque was lit but concealed by the high-backed flowers, tributes from the city of New York, from the federal government, the Brooklyn navy yard, many fliers who had known Bennett, and friends.

In a seemingly unending procession, the waiting mourners passed into the building at the Thirty-fourth-st entrance, took a brief glimpse of the dead flier, and then shuffled out at Thirty-Third-st. Thousands had collected outside the armory and the stream was an incessant one. Plans had been made to keep the armory open to the public from 8 a. m. to 9 a. m. but within the allotted hour it was

GAS EXTENSION PROGRAM WILL COST MILLION

Announcement of an extensive program of additions, improvements and betterments to the natural gas system, of which Circleville is a part, was made by George Forster, local manager, Friday.

This program, to be carried out during the entire year, is the Logan Gas Company, will provide for the growth and development of communities served by this company.

This announcement is concurrent with a statement by Raymond Cross, president of the company, to the effect that over a million dollars will be required for the company's 1928 development program alone. Increased efficiency, with assurance of good service, will result from these extensions and improvements, Mr. Cross stated.

To meet the increasing local demand for natural gas for industrial and domestic purposes, part of this huge sum will be expended in Circleville, enabling the gas company to keep ahead of the community's growth.

This program involves large expenditures for extensive field operations, additional field and transmission lines, compressor stations and necessary equipment and facilities to bring the gas—at increasing cost—from depths of the earth to the many communities served.

The steadily increasing number of new customers makes necessary the installation of many additional miles of distribution and service pipe as one of many equally important items in the expansion and improvement program.

These projects of the Logan Gas Company, are only a part of a vast expansion program now being undertaken by the companies affiliated with the Columbia System.

BENNETT ESTATE
VALUED AT $65,000

Bremen Fliers Start for Bennett Funeral; Landed in New York

(BULLETIN)

NEW YORK, April 27.—The Bremen fliers landed at Curtis field at 1:50 p. m., today to refuel and then proceeded to Washington for the funeral of Floyd Bennett.

LAKE ST. AGNES, QUE., April 27.—The triumphal trans-Atlantic journey of the Bremen's fliers turned to a mission of sadness today when they hopped off for Washington in the Ford relief plane to attend the funeral of a fellow hero of the air—Floyd Bennett.

After a run of about 1,000 feet the Ford took the air easily. It began to climb at once, meanwhile traveling in a westerly direction. It climbed steadily, clearing the mountains to the west of the lake. Soon it was lost to view, but in five minutes it re-appeared and circled over the airfield apparently waiting for Chamberlin to hop off. Then Balchen swung to the south flying at an altitude of about 2,000 feet.

Mechanics started the motor of the Fairchild and the Ford came swinging back again "loafing" over head while its escort was started down the runway. In a few minutes Chamberlin took off easily and gracefully and both planes sped southward and quickly were quickly out of sight.

The Ford plane is expected to reach Washington at about 3 o'clock this afternoon. It was announced that it would make one stop enroute to refuel, but the place where the stop would be made was not revealed because the fliers do not wish to be slowed up on their trip by welcoming crowds.

SHANGHAI, April 27.—More than 7,000 persons have been slaughtered by a great bandit horde in the region of Kingmen, according to advices reaching here today.

Persons of all ages—including many women and children—were reported to have been victims of the bandit attack.

Heavy property loss was reported.

Many in the bandit horde were believed to be deserters from the army who without provisions had escaped and were in need of food.

The great bandit group was reported to have sacked the city, causing considerable damage of property, in addition to killing the thousands of victims.

The scene of the bandit attack was believed to be in Shantung province where the Nationalist and Northern armies have been engaged in a vigorous civil strife for the past few weeks.

The Nationalists have made rapid inroads on Shantung and there have been numerous reports of desertions from the Northern forces.

LONDON, April 27.—Seven hundred Japanese troops today were reported moving inward from Tsing-Tao towards Tsinan in Shantung province of China where considerable looting by bandits has been reported, the Shanghai correspondent of the Daily Mail said today.

REP. MADDEN DEAD

WASHINGTON, April 27.—Representative Martin B. Madden of Illinois, for many years Republican leader of the house dropped dead this afternoon in his office in the appropriations committee room.

Madden had apparently been in good health and spirits during the early part of the day.

Heart disease was given as the cause of death.

Mr. Madden had served 12 consecutive terms.

NEW YORK PAUSES TO PAY RESPECTS TO DEAD AIR HERO

New York, April 27.—On an army caisson draped with the stars and stripes, the body of Floyd Bennett was borne through the streets here today from the Grand Central depot to the Seventy-first regiment armory. There, for one hour, the people of his home town—men, women and children—filed slowly past the flag-draped bier, paying a last sad tribute to the memory of the famous navy aviator.

The body, en route from Quebec, where Bennett died on Wednesday from pneumonia, for Washington, D. C., arrived at 7:30 o'clock Friday morning. Burial, with high military and naval honors, is to take place this afternoon at the Arlington National cemetery where so many of the nation's heroes have been laid to rest.

And while the funeral procession was being halted for New York City's homage, the three men for whom Bennett died—Fitzmaurice, Koehl and Von Huenefeld, were whirling overhead for Washington to attend the funeral. They hopped off from Lake St. Agnes, Quebec, at 7:10 a. m. Friday.

Widow on Train

Bennett's body arrived on a special car. Aboard the train was the grief-stricken widow, Mrs. Cora Bennett, and the dead flier's bosom friend, Commander Richard E. Byrd. With Byrd that Bennett achieved his greatest fame—a flight to the North Pole.

Thousands of people crowded into the Grand Central and lined the streets from the depot to the armory. It was a silent, reverent throng, and the authorities experienced no difficulty maintaining order. Squads of mounted police patrolled the streets, and 500 uniformed policemen were on duty in the railroad station.

The funeral procession moved slowly from the depot to the armory. On each side of the army caisson which bore the body marched eight armed soldiers and eight armed sailors in uniform. They were followed by one full company of the Seventy-first Regiment, National Guard, a company of the Sixteenth Infantry and about fifty uniformed sailors from the Brooklyn navy yard. Representing the city of New York was Governor Whalen, head of the mayor's reception committee to distinguished guests.

Mrs. Bennett and Byrd left immediately they were to remain until after the public paid its respects at the armory. At 9 o'clock, the doors of the armory were barred to the public and the room in which the coffin lay was reserved for a private service attended by the aviator's relatives and close friends.

Spectators 20 Deep

Park avenue was black with people as the funeral procession slowly wended its way to the armory. The spectators were twenty deep back of the curbstone, and hundreds viewed the procession from windows of the buildings along the route. The mournful music of the Sixteenth Infantry band accentuated the sadness of the occasion.

Four seaplanes from the Rockaway Point naval air station dropped floral tributes over the procession. Flags which would have greeted Bennett if he had lived to pilot the Bremen fliers back from Greenly Island were at half mast throughout the city.

A few minutes after 8 o'clock the cortege arrived at the armory. The body was taken to the private room of Col. Walter Allen De La Mater, commanding officer of the 71st regiment, National Guard. The coffin was decorated with flowers from many friends, a particularly large bouquet having been sent by the mayor's committee. Then the public was admitted.

Unending Procession

The caasket, placed upon a catafalque, was all but concealed by the high-banked flowers, tributes from the city of New York, from the federal government, the Brooklyn navy yard, many fliers who had known Bennett, and friends.

In a seemingly unending procession, the waiting mourners passed into the building at the Thirty-Fourth-st entrance, took a brief glimpse of the dead flier, and then shuffled out at Thirty-Third-st. Thousands had collected outside the armory and the stream was an incessant one. Plans had been made to keep the armory open to the public from 8 a. m. to 9 a. m. but within the allotted hour it was

GAS EXTENSION PROGRAM WILL COST MILLION

Announcement of an extensive program of additions, improvements and betterments to the natural gas system, of which Circleville is a part, was made by George Forster, local manager, Friday.

This program, to be carried on during the entire year by the Logan Gas Company, will provide for the growth and development of communities served by this company.

This announcement is concurrent with a statement by Raymond Cross, president of the company, to the effect that over a million dollars will be required for the company's 1928 development program alone. Increased efficiency, with assurance of good service, will result from these extensions and improvements, Mr. Cross stated.

To meet the increasing local demand for natural gas for industrial and domestic purposes, part of this huge sum will be expended in Circleville, enabling the gas company to keep ahead of the community's growth.

This program involves large expenditures for extensive field operations, additional field and transmission lines, compressor stations and necessary equipment and facilities to bring the gas—at increasing cost—from depths of the earth to the many communities served.

The steadily increasing number of new customers makes necessary the installation of many additional miles of distribution and service pipe as one of many equally important items in the expansion and improvement program.

These projects of the Logan Gas Company, are only a part of a vast expansion program now being undertaken by the companies affiliated with the Columbia System.

BENNETT ESTATE VALUED AT $65,000

Mayor B. T. Hodges was again called upon to officiate at a wedding ceremony Thursday afternoon in the mayor's court. The bride and bridegroom in this instance were Dawson Chandler and Alice Marie Henry, both of Circleville.

WOMEN SIDETRACK STUDY OF DRY LAW

CHICAGO, April 27 — The League of Women Voters disposed of its two most troublesome issues, birth control and prohibition by refusing to accept either as a subject for study.

Proponents of birth control legislation agreed not to continue their fight on the floor of the convention. They had lost in committee.

Prohibition, however, brought about a spirited discussion. A special committee which recommended that the eighteenth amendment and the Volstead act not be included in the study program was sustained by the delegates.

The league added farm relief to its study and reiterated its support of governmental development of Muscle Shoals and the eight-hour day for working women. Both of the latter have won league support at other conventions.

After a committee recommended league support of sterilization of the unfit, the delegates voted to continue the study of it, hesitating to give the project a full endorsement. Sterilization has been on the league study program for years.

MARINES ADVANCE ON GEN. SANDINO

MANAGUA, Nicaragua, April 27 — Large detachments of United States Marines were reported to be advancing today in forced marches on the Pis Pis mining district in an effort to block retreat of Gen. Augustino Sandino's rebel army.

No announcements have been made of the Marine advance at base headquarters here.

Raid by the Sandino army which resulted in occupation of several mines and capture of George R. Marshall of New York, have resulted in intensive activity.

Fresh reports coming into Managua said that Marshall was being well treated by the rebels. He was the only man captured when the Sandino forces took over the mines.

There was an unconfirmed report that Marshall had been wounded.

TWO FOUND GUILTY OF $200,000 NOTE FORGERIES

FORT WAYNE, IND., April 27 — Clyde A. Walb, former Republican state chairman, and Valentine Weaver, former president of the defunct LaGrange First National bank will be sentenced in federal court here today for conspiring to violate the national banking laws.

The two men were indicted several months ago charged with defrauding the First National Bank through note forgeries involving approximately $200,000.

Durant Motors Inc. has placed an order to its Lansing, (Mich.) plant, for a contract for a $750,000 extension which will increase the plant's capacity to 1,000 cars a day.

impossible to permit all those who had gathered to view the body.

Rich and poor alike filed past the casket where Bennett, arrayed in the unsung and drab flying suit in which he flew to his death, lay. There were working girls and society women, policemen and bankers, day laborers and high-salaried professional men, actresses and housewives — people of every walk of life.

At 9 o'clock the armory was closed to all but the honor guard and the family and close friends of the dead aviator. Mrs. Bennett, herself seriously ill, his aged mother, Mrs. Henrietta Bennett, a step-daughter and Commander Byrd and Mrs. Byrd were then admitted to the death room. A few minutes before this hour Mrs. Bennett, the widow, had returned from her home in Brooklyn where she had gone to obtain her husband's naval uniform which he will wear when buried in Arlington cemetery this afternoon.

Brief services were conducted by Daniel A. Polling, president of the Church Federation of Greater New York. He read a few verses from Psalms and then delivered a short memorial sermon. The casket was then closed and the procession, reforming before the armory, began a march to the Pennsylvania station.

BENNETT LAID TO REST NEAR ADMIRAL PEARY

WASHINGTON, April 27 — The capital's most impressive military funeral since the burial of Leonard Wood was arranged today for Floyd Bennett, U. S. N., whose heroic death while on a daring errand of relief has caused world-wide sorrow.

The body, scheduled to arrive at 3 o'clock this afternoon, will be taken immediately to Arlington National cemetery by a naval escort, to be buried in a plot close by the resting place of Admiral Peary.

Although Secretary of Navy Wilbur is in Richmond, Va., to fill a previous engagement, a large group of high naval officers were assigned places in the cortege across the Potomac to the Arlington Hills.

Commander Byrd, collaborator with Bennett in the first airplane flight over the North Pole, will accompany Mrs. Bennett from New York for the burial services.

Coincident with the announcement of the navy's plans for the funeral came the official announcement that Bennett's application for eighteen months leave of absence for this summer's Byrd flight to the South Pole had been granted.

No Official Reception
WASHINGTON, April 27 — The visit of the German-Irish Trans-Atlantic flyers to Washington late today is going to be very quiet, so quiet in fact that the United States government is not going to be officially aware of their presence at all.

The German ambassador formally requested the state department this morning to consider the impending visit as being made "incognito." He asked that no official recognition be accorded their presence in the capital overnight.

This procedure was decided upon for several reasons. One being the fact that the flyers' presence in Washington will be solely for the purpose of paying their tribute to Floyd Bennett, who sacrificed his life in an effort to aid them, and the general desire that no note of welcome or celebration should be injected into the simple, impressive services of the dead flyer.

Dress the Children to Their Hearts' Desire, Bless 'Em!

SHABBY LITTLE ONES FEEL BIG HANDICAP

Winifred Black Harks Back to Days of Her Childhood and Catches Viewpoint of the Rising Generation.

By WINIFRED BLACK

"DRESS 'em up and you lose 'em." That's what those who know a certain section of the world say only too well, when they speak of women.

"Dress your children up and you make them," that's what Miss Ida Curry, of the New York State Charities Aid Association says.

"A shabby child is a sad child," says Miss Curry. "And a sad child is a stupid child. And a stupid child is very often a naughty child." There you are, right back at the beginning again.

I wonder if there isn't a little bit of truth in what Miss Curry says. Do you remember the time when all the girls wore capes—lovely floating capes—gray, lined with blue—or dark green lined with red—didn't they call it Cardinal in those days—or brown, lined with scarlet—and your mother said you had a perfectly good coat and she wasn't going to buy you a cape no matter what the other girls had?

"It's hard enough to keep you from having pneumonia all winter, anyway," said Mother. "You with a cape, streaming in the wind behind you. No, I thank you. A good comfortable coat that buttons up to the throat for you, and fewer doctor's bills for me."

And you cried and cried and when Grace came to see you in her gray cape with the blue lining, and it seems to me it had a little hood on the back—and that was lined with blue too—oh, a heavenly thing—you tried to persuade your mother to change her mind and she wouldn't. You thought that when you grew up and had children you would let them have cakes by the dozen—no matter what the doctor said.

Then one day you came home and there was a gray cape—the sortest kind of gray—lined with blue just the color of the sky in June—all spread out on your bed. The hood had a silver tassel to it. You thought you were dreaming and it just fitted you exactly around the shoulders. You felt sort of faint and sort of dizzy and sort of excited.

You ran out and there was your mother, pretending to look very seriously for some books in the library and you hugged her until she begged for mercy and she said: "Oh, well, you made such a time about it, and Spring is about here anyway."

Didn't you feel like a Princess in the Arabian Nights and weren't you happy and proud? You couldn't get that thrill out of a string of real pearls today.

Vanity—oh, yes, vanity is a bad thing! But humiliation is a bad thing, too.

Children are such queer little things. They ought to live in a great, big, happy, carefree world—but they don't. They live in a little narrow world, ruled by strange cruel laws—what one does the others must do or be an outcast—what one wears that must the other wear or suffer the pangs of the despised.

Yes, clothes make a difference with children and so do clean hands and smooth hair. I don't see why they should, but somehow they do.

I'd rather give a wistful little girl a nice new plaid dress than go to the best party in the world.

I'd rather see the look in a funny little freckled faced lad's eyes when he gets a suit like the "other fellows" than I would to sit in a box at the grandest Grand Opera that was ever granded.

Queer, isn't it?

Love's Embers "Revelations of a Wife"

By Adele Garrison

Stage's Midnight Toil Interrupted By Shadowy Figures in the Orchard.

INTO Lillian's eyes flashed a gleam of triumph as I told her I had definitely discovered that the characters on the paper hidden in the Princess Olina's miniature were Sumerian.

"Good girl!" she said. "I'm surer now than ever that this is a missing and most important piece of a puzzle which has been taxing keener brains than yours or mine for some time. There's only one caution I must give you, although I do not think you need it. But be very careful that there is no possible chance for error in your decoding. If the wild fantastic hunch I have is right, some of those characters will be translated into figures and an error of one would mean a mistake of the whole thing."

She must mean a formula of some kind, I told myself, trembling with a sense of responsibility which was mine. For neither Lillian nor any of her associates, not even that last word in code solving, Allen Drake himself, happened to have the peculiar knowledge which my association with the old professor of ancient languages had given me. If a mistake were made it would be mine alone, with little possibility of checking it.

"I will take every possible precaution," I told her, and she flashed an approving smile at me as she turned toward the door. "You don't need to tell me that," she said. "Better not work any more tonight, though. You'll be all the fresher for the problem in the morning."

"I'm going to have a hot bath and get into bed right away," I said. "I'm going down to the kitchen for a glass of hot milk for myself," she commented, "and I'll bring you one."

She hurried out before I could object, and indeed I did not want to stop her. I felt the need of every possible aid to slumber that I could get. But my hot scented bath and the hot milk which Lillian set inside my door without waiting to talk to me, had no effect whatever upon my wakefulness. I lay motionless, counting thousands of sheep for an interminable time. Then, in despair of getting to sleep, and feeling my mind keyed up for work, I slipped out of bed, put on my bathrobe and slippers, and switching on my lamp, took up the work of studying out the characters of the coded paper, where I had left it.

My first point, I knew, was to get a starting point, some character repeated enough to make it probable that it was an "a" or an "e" or that it was a commonly repeated letter in any code. But whoever had fashioned this intricate code had done it with diabolical cleverness. I saw that it was an infinitely more tricky and intricate thing than the other code of Sumerian characters had been. But I set my teeth with the determination that I would wrest from them if I did not sleep for a week.

I always had kept a copy of that old list of conspirators which had been contained in the code I had solved years before, and taking it from the place where I had locked it away for security, I began to compare it with the thin piece of paper which I had copied from the one in Princess Olina's miniature. It was not long before with a little gasp of triumph that I saw one name of that old list was repeated in the characters of the paper before me. There were some variations, it is true, but I knew that at last I was on the point of going into these "new" exercises we need to liberate the leg muscles.

All "rising up" the balls of the feet then slowly lowering the heels to the floor again, exercises are splendid for limbering up the leg muscles, and this simple routine can be done whenever you think of it for several days. It is splendid also for the use of leg muscles that follows the use of leg muscles that are unaccustomed to this kind of work.

Ensemble Designed for Formal Wear

Capes Restored to Favor

In Latest Spring

Fashion Notes

By Marie Marot

REPRESENTING the formal afternoon mode are the two ensembles pictured to the left. In one, heavy black crepe and velvet are combined with a printed foulard. As may be seen from the drawing, the coat is part-cape and part-cape—a combination which Parisian couturiers have formerly used in the evening wrap, but which is quite new for afternoon wear. It provides stunning contrast of line.

The printed foulard which accompanies it is made simply with a diagonal neckline and velvet bow at the left hip—not too full to interfere with the line of the coat.

Of equal charm is the dark blue crepe ensemble pictured to the right. A soft roll collar growing into Tuxedo folds enhances the three-quarter length coat, which is lined with the beige crepe of the blouse.

The blouse creates the most interesting note of this ensemble. Three diagonal appliques of blue crepe cut across the front to converge at a tie at the left side. Two narrow "ties" creep away from the round neck at the shoulders and pull loosely through an insertion occurring in the blouse about three or four inches below the plain neckline, contriving a popular effect.

Not least in importance is the "coiffure" which fits snugly and smoothly over the hair. In some of these, shiny cellophane is arranged on a felt body to give the effect of human hair—even to the part! A nose veil adds charm and formality.

Measles the Most "Catching" of Diseases

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.

United States Senator from New York,
Former Commissioner of Health, New York City

IN infancy and early childhood one of the chief causes of death is the common disease known as measles. In and of itself this ailment is not serious. Like whooping cough, however, it may be followed by pneumonia, bronchitis or tuberculosis. Grown people laugh at measles. But I assure you this disease is not so funny when it attacks a grown person. Among the Indian tribes it is a fatal ailment.

The "incubation period" of measles is about two weeks. But the disease may come on a week after exposure, or it may be delayed even to the eighteenth day.

Whatever may be the exact nature of the infecting agent, it is carried by the secretions of the nose, mouth and throat. It may be transmitted through sneezing, or by other contact with the secretions of the victim.

Measles is the most highly contagious disease known to man. It is "catching" from the time of the first symptoms. It continues to be so until the catarrhal symptoms disappear. For a week or more, therefore, the measles patient is a menace to his fellows.

One is not likely to have measles more than once. But an occasional person may have a second, and even a third or fourth attack.

It is a mistake for a mother deliberately to expose her child to the dangers of measles. Until the age of five certainly, there should be made every effort to avoid exposure. The disease is the largest among the very young. If the disease can be guarded against until the child is well developed, he will fight off its effects with greater ease.

The first symptoms of measles are chilliness or a real chill. Then come fever, headache, and marked increase in the secretions of the nose and throat. The eyes are red and run water. There is marked sensitiveness to light. Sneezing and coughing are always present.

Up to this time, the attack may seem exactly like a common cold. In a day or two after this, or about four days after the first signs, there appears an eruption on the face. Dark, red, smooth spots come out on the face and later spread to the entire body. The skin may itch and burn.

After the eruption begins to clear away there will be observed on the skin scales or flakes. This peeling-off process may take some time, several weeks even.

The patient should be kept in bed and surrounded by all the sanitary means of assisting the cure. He must sleep with the window open, and get all the fresh air possible. You must watch out for the possible complications.

Do not neglect a continued cough. Build up the body by simple food and quiet living. Do not consider the patient "cured" until all the symptoms disappear.

The itching of the eruption may be relieved by applying petroleum jelly, oil, cocoa-butter, or cold cream. These greases, too, will keep the secretions from floating off into the air.

Guard the rest of the family by protecting them against the most serious of the patient's secretions. Catch them on squares of gauze. Burn these so nobody will come in contact with them.

Tomorrow's HOROSCOPE

By Genevieve Kemble.

SATURDAY, APRIL 28.

Give to the world the best you have and the best will come back to you.—Trine.

A most propitious rule of the major planetary forces proclaim this a day for reaching the rewards of past effort and for renewed determination to reach to the goal of the ambitions. It is favorable for launching projects for dealing with important corporations, and powerful individuals. The renewal of contracts and agreements to the advantage is foretold. In personal matters, restraint and amiability should be used. Beware small losses and extravagance.

Those whose birthday it is may prepare for an important year of success, progress and achievement of many ambitions. They should deal with powerful persons and institutions, making advantageous contracts and launching new undertakings. But be discreet and governed in personal relations. Look to small losses.

A child born on this day should be clever, versatile, ambitious and should reach high place in position. It may be free and magnanimous also.

Advice to Girls

By Annie Laurie.

DEAR ANNIE LAURIE: I am a girl 14 years old. I am in love with a boy 14. He seems to care for me and no one else. Do you advise me to continue the friendship?

BROWN EYES.

YES, I think, my dear, that 14 is the age when one is in love with a boy 14. It is love of love for a single minute. Have your friends, many of them, and have the dear, happy, good times that will mean so much to you in after life. Just be friends with everybody, but don't let any sentimental nonsense spoil your good times. Forget about love for a few years and just be the happy, sweet girl that I'm sure you must be.

AVALANCHE OF LIES RESULT OF GOSSIP

Distortion of a Harmless Original Fact Grows with Each Repetition Until the Result Is Often Ruinous.

By DR. LOUIS E. BISCH

GOSSIP never tells the truth. And the longer gossip runs the greater the number of lies that pile up in its wake.

Gossip, carried by word of mouth from one person to another, soon changes and metamorphoses itself so that the original bit of news that started it off develops into something quite alien to its parent.

The beginning is one thing. The end? Nobody knows. Gossip is like a snowball rolling down a mountainside. Not only does it enlarge and change its shape and character as it proceeds, but it increases in momentum and in its possibilities for doing harm as well.

If there is a smash-up that's the end of the snowball—turned avalanche!

Only when gossip has done its maximum amount of harm does it automatically cease. The mischief in gossip is its inherent and salient trait.

That is why little-tattle has always been frowned down upon. That is also why gossipers are usually credited with intent to deceive.

One cannot gainsay the fact that chronic gossipers often deliberately set out to distort the truth. They give the essentials of a story of plausible twist which is readily acceptable, yet which is, nevertheless, a lie.

On the other hand, there is a curious psychological principle involved that makes it impossible for gossip even to tell the truth, despite the very best of intentions of those who indulge in it.

What I refer to is the psychological principle called "Retrospective Falsification of Memory."

It is absolutely impossible for an individual to repeat anything that he hears word for word. It is likewise almost impossible for him to remember, with absolute exactitude, the gist or essence of a conversation. The reason is that nobody's memory is perfect. Nobody's recollection is infallible.

Now, then, when a piece of news is repeated, the conscious mind fills in the memory gaps in order to make a logical story.

The larger the number of items that have faded from memory, the greater becomes the ingenuity of the mind in substituting and filling in. The poorer the memory the greater the distortion of original fact.

We try to be logical when we gossip, with the result—a pretty story that never was.

Watch your falsification of memory tricks. Often the mind deceives even its owner. We cannot always depend entirely upon what we see and hear.

The mind is not as photographic as we think. Emotion and prejudice enter into everything and this is where the danger lies!

HOME-MAKING HELPS

By Wanda Barton

Keeping Up With a Changing World.

MAPS have at last come into their own among laymen. Interior decorators have placed their stamp of approval on them and all who know the geography and love it will find the maps a happy innovation. We first had our attention called to them by seeing a map of Mexico and the Central American countries traced on a deep cream-colored parchment lamp shade.

Maps in colors with figures, ships, animals and fish to enliven the scenes are suggested as decorations for the modern nursery or children's room. The decorative characters of kings, philosophers, poets, and militant figures in history may thus become familiar without serious study.

Those who own old-fashioned maps are getting them down from the attic and brushing off the dust to realize that they really have unexpected treasures. Some are having them framed, others placing them in screens, door panels, or are putting them on rollers for window shades in halls or libraries. One-shades in halls or libraries. One-shades in halls or libraries. One-shades in halls or libraries.

Maps placed under the bottom of a glass tray which was wicker rimmed painted in Chinese red lacquer. Sectional maps in leaf frames attached to the wall so they may be readily turned like book leaves for study are convenient. Some are glass covered, others are protected with mica, others are fitted tightly into the frame and are left uncovered. The high glazed finish enables one to wipe the dust off with soft cloth, or even a damp cloth, without injury.

A new idea for those who own country homes and estates is to have a map made of their section of the country, the map showing the roads that lead most directly to the house, marked clearly, for automobiles. It shows the wayside eating places, oil stations and service points that may be of use and comfort for travelers. The map also shows the nearest landing field for the airplane traveler. The map in miniature, printed on a corner of the stationery, while telegraph, postal and air mail information is on the opposite corner of the page.

Not to be outdone, geographical china has also made its appearance with mica of the country on cup and saucer and larger sections on platters and plates. On transparencies for window use in metal frames one may have a favorite map done in rich coloring so that the light shining through it makes an attractive picture.

Famous Composers

By COZETTE DOUGLASS

Clement Philibert Leo Delibes.

LEO DELIBES, one of the foremost of the French composers, has left us so much of loveliness in his music, that his name burns as a bright flame in a glowing bed of genius.

He was born at St. Germain du Val on February 21, 1836. In 1848, when he was twelve years of age, he entered the Paris Conservatoire, and there studied under Adams, Le Couppey, Bazin and Benoit. Through the influence of Adolphe Charles Adam, he became accompanist at the Theatre Lyrique and organist at the Church of St. Jean at St. Francois.

Naturally, his first attempt at composition was along dramatic lines, and a one-act opera "Deux Sous de Charbon" was published in 1855. Twelve more operettas followed in rapid succession and in 1863 he was appointed second chorus master at the Grand Opera. The same year, his cantata "Alger" was heard for the first time.

After this success, he turned his attention to ballet music and in 1870 his "Coppelia" was first produced at the Grand Opera. This lovely composition is as popular today as it was when first produced. In 1872, when Delibes married, he resigned his post as second chorus master. In this year he published a collection of melodies. His first important dramatic composition was a comic opera produced at the Opera Comique on May 24, 1875. This was succeeded by several other operas, and on April 14, 1883 "Lakme" was produced with great success and enthusiasm at the Opera Comique.

"Lakme" remains the most popular of Delibes' dramatic compositions. In 1871 Delibes became a Chevalier of the Legion of Honor, and in 1884 was appointed to succeed Victor Masse as director of the Institut de France.

Delibes' music is essentially French, being light, graceful and melodious. While his operas may be said to be more or less conventionalized, yet he is without doubt a master of ballet music, and probably stands highest in this branch of composition.

He died in Paris on January 16, 1891.

Wise Little Dicky Duck Fools His Enemies.

DICKY DUCK was considered the wisest little duck in the whole barnyard and he surely deserved the name.

His Mama often warned him about going across the lake too far but one day Dicky Duck forgot a 4 seeing some lovely green weeds over on the other side of the lake, Dicky Duck swam over. He was so busy eating, he didn't see Freddy Fox until he was grabbed from behind and chucked into a big bag.

"He's mine," cried a second voice, "I saw him first!"

"Maybe so," replied Freddy Fox, "but I have him, so that makes him mine."

"Gracious me," quacked Dicky Duck quick as a wink. His funny little duck-mind working fast, "what's the use of tussling over me. I admit Freddy Fox grabbed me, but why not sit down quietly and discuss the matter. It's bad enough to be caught unaware without having my mind folks quarrel over me. Mama has just fattened me up so that I'll make a wonderful dinner for one of you. So pull straps or something, but once we've got the bag so I can breathe a wee bit. I'd hate to see Silver Fox cheat you, Freddy Fox. I'll watch him, if you let me poke my head out."

"Well, now, anyone so thoughtful as you are, Dicky Duck, surely deserves to be pleased," and Freddy Fox opened the top of the bag so Dicky Duck could stick his head out.

BUSINESS REPUTATION

BUSINESS men spend millions on campaigns of advertising designed to obtain national reputations for their product. When they make the name of some article well known over a large area, that business reputation may be worth many millions of dollars to them, and it is just as substantial property for the time being as houses and lands.

When people want some such article, they go into a store and ordinarily inquire for something they have seen advertised. Goods that have acquired such a reputation are sure to make enormous sales. The same principle works in building up the reputation of a place of business in a community. The reputation of a well advertised store is worth a very large sum. If people want something in a certain line, the first thought is to go to some well known store for it, and that reputation has generally been created by advertising.

It is a pretty hard thing to butt up against the reputation of a well advertised store. That reputation makes an impression on everyone's mind in that community. Every time that store prints one of its advertisements, it makes a little dent in the consciousness of the readers of that newspaper. That impression gets a little deeper and deeper as the advertising continues. It creates the feeling, when people want anything carried by that store, that that is a good place to go for it.

People like to deal with the things that are familiar. They enjoy meeting people they know better than strangers. When a store advertises regularly, it creates familiarity with its name. People feel acquainted with that store, they have an idea of the kind of service it gives, it becomes a business friend to serve them with the things they need, and they go there constantly.

SPRING FEVER

ALONG in the spring a feeling of unrest comes over the indoor people. It is partly a tired kind of languor from the approach of warmer weather, but still more it may be a discontent with one's daily task or surroundings. The great outdoors looks so enticing.

About now one feels like breaking all the customary habits quelling the job at the bench or in the home, and roaming far away. It is a kind of inheritance from the less fixed habits of the old days, in the times when people worked what hours they chose.

Fortunately our people's working time is not as long as it was a few years ago, and they get considerable time off in which they can roam around the country and enjoy sports and pastimes.

We may think we would like a life of idle roaming, but we should get tired of it quickly enough if we tried it. So our spring fever should not be permitted to dominate our whole mood.

THE JAZZ MUTINY

IT is to be hoped that the guests of the party-headed old British sailors of Nelson's day have not heard about the recent "mutiny," or whatever it was, on the British warship Royal Oak.

This affair developed, according to dispatches, when the captain refused to allow a jazz band to play aboard ship.

British naval vessels sail mutually occasionally in the old days—but never over anything like that. The old-timers could put up with weevily bread, semi-rotten salt beef and vinegar-like hme juice for months after months; they could endure things that modern Jack never imagines; and when they mutinied, it was a real mutiny. But a mutiny over a jazz band? The old-timers would pull down Davy Jones' locker in sheer disgust.

YOU may call
Your house
A mansion with
Its heavy, walnut
Doors,
With tall ceilings
And thick carpets
On the many
Spacious floors,
You may say
You have Fine servants who
Are at your beck
And call
And a dozen costly
Autos for each
Separate wide stall;
Here's a bust
That cost a fortune
Of a famous man,
You know,
Here is visible
The earmarks
Of a lot of wealth
And show,
Choice wines and Rich food
Waiting
When you're tired of Work or Play
And a horde of friends
To greet you
At the close of Every day,
But I wonder what's
The value
Of this castle
With its dome
If you've failed to
Live real in it,
And to make your house
A home—

And what we mean to say
Is,

Dolores Costello in "OLD SAN FRANCISCO" is a Warner Bros. picture.

SYNOPSIS

Don Hernandez Vasquez and his beautiful granddaughter Dolores occupy the old Vasquez ranch overlooking San Francisco. The prosperity that came to San Francisco by the discovery of gold in California missed the Vasquez ranch where indolent idlers did not keep abreast of modern progress. The ranch is coveted by Buckwell, San Francisco's political boss. His lawyer, Brandon, with Brandon's nephew, Terry, try to buy the ranch. Vasquez won't sell. Terry falls in love with Dolores. Buckwell, incensed by refusal, plans to void the old Vasquez land grant and evict Vasquez. Terry is furious and goes to warn Vasquez.

They both burst into merry laughter and Terry lost no time in presenting the remaining tower with due formality.

"Thank you," smiled Dolores shyly, pinning it in her hair with true Spanish artistry.

"I would like to bring you an arm full of American Beauties, their color is like your cheeks." Terry's admiration was making him surprisingly complimentary.

"It is strange that you came out here. I was wishing you would," confessed Dolores with winning frankness.

"You were? That's great, but why? Is anything wrong?" Terry suddenly remembered what had brought him to the ranch and his light hearted banter gave way to anxiety.

"Grandfather is ill with worry about the ranch being taken away."

"My ranch is not for sale, no matter who wants to buy."

from him. We don't know what to do. Her great eyes were opened wide in perplexity.

Dolores did not have any hesitancy about confiding private troubles to Terry; by some miracle it seemed to make her feel better.

"That's a funny thing," exclaimed Terry. "I came out to try to help you because I was afraid your grandfather did not understand how grave the land grant situation is."

"Yes, I think he does, but he is unwilling to take advice from outsiders."

"I'm not an outsider," quickly objected Terry and Dolores just as quickly agreed. Neither of them realized how much they were taking for granted in so short a time, nor how strange their sympathetic loyalty would have sounded had anyone been there to hear.

"I am afraid Grandfather would not listen to a relative of Mr. Brandon's."

Startled at her own affront, Terry clutched her throat in a futile effort to suppress the thing she had just said.

"No need," consoled Terry. Dolores looked at what seemed to be a long time before adding, "At least I will try and talk with him anyhow, and in case I fail I hope you will let me know if you need me." Taking out a card he offered it to her.

"Thank you, Terry," she said gratefully. "I will," and she clutched the card without looking at it. "That's a promise," Terry smiled and held out his hand.

Where Dolores' delicate fingers touched his palm he forgot about all promises but one, and that was the sacred vow that he hoped to make some day with her.

They were rudely recalled from their enjoyment of each other when Vasquez stalked out into the patio, coldly furious at seeing them together. Dolores pulled her hand from Terry's warm clasp and drew back anxiously, afraid of the impending outburst.

"Good afternoon, sir," greeted Terry, meeting the old man's eyes coolly.

"The same to you, Senator, and may I, as head of the house, inquire your business here?"

"To warn and help you, sir," Terry's eyes did not waver.

"Why should you infer that I require your help? Inquired Vasquez in still indignation.

"Please, Grandfather," quickly interposed Dolores, "allow him to speak!"

The old man looked from Terry to the beloved granddaughter, whose hand rested on his shoulder in alarm. He had never been able to refuse anything that this only child of his only son asked of him.

"Very well," he acquiesced, bowing stiffly. "Come into the living room, Senator, and be comfortable."

Dolores stood aside, watching them disappear within the familiar shadows of the ranch. Terry's card was still clutched convulsively in his hand. As if fearful of being left alone, she hurried after the men, but stopped to rather a bouquet from a large clump of towers. She was near enough to watch without eavesdropping. The additional explanation for Dolores' interest lay in the fact that she did not want Terry to depart without her knowing it.

True to habit and custom Vasquez insisted upon a round of wine before discussing the subject that was uppermost in their minds.

Unable to delay any longer, Terry leaned forward, saying: "Senator Vasquez, know that unless you sell this ranch you will lose it just the same. Those fighting you are cruel and ruthless."

"Why do you think you know this?" Vasquez inquired stiffly. "I heard it from the man's own lips—the man who intends seizing your property to increase his own power and wealth. He is paying whatever figure was offered you to have your original land grants declared invalid. And he can do it." Finished Terry with conviction.

"I am willing to concede that you are acting in good faith, Senator," said Vasquez sternly. "But I do not believe they could do such a thing. Why, my ancestors founded San Francisco and the Vasquez family has dwelt here in peace and happiness since 1776."

Terry sank back helplessly. The fire in Vasquez's eyes showed that he was inwardly raging at the bare thought of such an action.

"When they fight, you will be powerless, sir," Terry was doing his best.

"Not 'sir'!" Vasquez's voice rang out in protest and crossing to the mantle he took the famous old weapon from its case in the wall. "This sword," he explained proudly, "showing it to Terry, 'has protected this land and the Vasquez line since Spain's conquest in California—and it will not fail me now.'"

"Unfortunately," pursued Terry, "the politicians of San Francisco have no respect for tradition and a man's feelings. They are merciless when it comes to securing what they want and perhaps the greatest leader of them all is determined to add your ranch to his holdings because he knows that its value will increase as the city extends this way."

"My ranch is not for sale, no matter who wants to buy. I once killed a man, Senator, because he stole a Vasquez horse and killed my brother—I will not hesitate to inflict a similar punishment on any man who dares trespass on my property rights." While Vasquez spoke he was reinspired with his youthful fire and courage—his spirit was magnificent! "Let us go out into the sunshine, Senator; it will be more pleasant."

As they approached the doorway, Don Luis galloped up on his horse and waved gaily to Dolores. Terry's heart skipped a beat when she raised her bouquet in answer to the salute. And his thoughts were in a tumult when he saw the man diamond and great Dolores by pressing her finger tips to his lips. He could not hear Don Luis say, "Behold what I have brought you, my loved one!" but he saw a long jewel box presented to Dolores and could tell that the greeting was more intimate than he wanted any man but himself to enjoy.

"Ah, thank the Good Mother that I have lived to see this respectful day," sighed Vasquez, smiling happily as he watched the little scene.

Terry looked at him quickly, his brows puckered in a boyish frown of interrogation.

"The last of a family as proud and as glorious as my own," continued Vasquez, waving his hand toward Don Luis. "The only one to whom I would trust the happiness of my child."

Terry groaned inwardly. He had dared dream such glorious plans for Dolores and himself, and all the time she was promised to the picture-show Spaniard!

"I thought—she—had never been away from the ranch," Terry could not understand it.

"That is true except as regards calling on friends. They were called from within—their traditions are the same as ours. For the daughter of a 'leguista' to marry other than a man of her own blood would be to court the bitterest of woes."

Lesson for April 29

THE COST OF DISCIPLESHIP

LESSON TEXT—Mark 10:17-27: 12:13-44.

GOLDEN TEXT—Where your treasure is, there will your heart be also.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Loving Jesus
BEST OF ALL
JUNIOR TOPIC—Putting Jesus First

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—The Supreme Choice
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—The Peril of Riches.

1. The Rich Young Ruler (10:17-27).

His question, "What shall I do that I may inherit eternal life?" This young man was in earnest. He came running and kneeling to Jesus. This question reveals a void in his heart. He was a young man with a lovable character. "Jesus beholding him loved him." He was moral, honest, earnest and courageous, but had a defective theology. He thought that eternal life could be obtained by good works. Though he claimed to have kept the law, he was conscious of lacking something. He was willing to do something to fill up that which was lacking, therefore he came to Jesus to make inquiry as to that lack.

2. Jesus' reply (vv. 18-20).

He knew the young man's heart and put his finger on the weak spot in his life. Jesus reiterated the commandments. The young man averred that he had all his life kept these commandments, but when it came to parting with his possessions in order to help his neighbor he parted with the Lord, going away sorrowful. This revealed the fact that he was a covetous man, a violator of the tenth commandment.

3. Lacking one thing and yet lost (vv. 21, 22).

When the Lord pointed out to him that the defect in his life was the love of money, he was unwilling to pay the price. When the time came in his life to choose between eternal life and riches, he chose wealth and parted company with Christ, perhaps forever.

3. The peril of riches (vv. 23-27).

Jesus said, "How hardly shall it be for them that have riches to enter the kingdom of God." When he discerned the astonishment of the disciples he answered again and said, "How hard is it for them that trust in riches to enter into the kingdom of God. It is easier for a camel to go through the eye of a needle than for a rich man to enter the kingdom of God." The difficulty does not lie in the fact that a man possesses riches, for one may possess riches and still be an heir to the kingdom. Wealth is a mighty power. In itself it is good. It will provide bread for the widow and orphan, amelioration for the suffering and send the gospel of Christ to the ends of the earth. The peril of riches lies in trusting in them. However, the step from possession of riches to trusting in them is a very short one. The tendency of growing wealth is to destroy the noble life of the soul. As long as a man possesses riches he is safe, but as soon as riches possess the man he is in deadly peril.

4. The Widow's Mite (Mark 12: 41-44).

Jesus had spent a strenuous day and was now quietly watching the surging throng. Observe:

1. Jesus strolling over against the treasury (v. 41). The treasury was the place where the worshippers deposited their tithes and offerings. Jesus sat where He could see them drop their money into the chest. He saw the poor casting into the treasury their small coins and He also saw the rich bringing larger coins. It is a solemn truth that Jesus' eye always beholds the gifts of the people. We may be able to conceal them from the people, but we cannot conceal them from His eye.

2. A certain poor widow threw into the treasury two mites (v. 42). The mite was the smallest copper coin made. The mite was worth about one-fiftieth of a cent, therefore her offering was one-fiftieth of a cent in value.

3. Jesus said unto His disciples, "Verily I say unto you that this poor widow hath cast more in than all they who have cast into the treasury" (v. 43). The Lord estimates gifts by the motive of the heart and by the amount.

4. Gifts are measured by what the giver has lost, not by what was given (v. 44). This widow cast into the treasury all that she had, even all her living. The rich gave of their abundance. Though their gifts were much more than that of the poor widow, yet they had an abundance left.

This woman's sacrifice goes on. Many devoted Christians have followed her example and have given their all.

BUSINESS REPUTATION

BUSINESS men spend millions on campaigns of advertising designed to obtain national reputations for their product. When they make the name of some article well known over a large area, that business reputation may be worth many millions of dollars to them, and it is just as substantial property for the time being as houses and lands.

When people want some such article, they go into a store and ordinarily inquire for something they have seen advertised. Goods that have acquired such a reputation are sure to make enormous sales.

The same principle works in building up the reputation of a place of business in a community. The reputation of a well advertised store is worth a very large sum. If people want something in a certain line, the first thought is to go to some well known store for it, and that reputation has generally been created by advertising.

It is a pretty hard thing to butt up against the reputation of a well advertised store. That reputation makes an impression on everyone's mind in that community. Every time that store prints one of its advertisements, it makes a little dent in the consciousness of the readers of that newspaper. That impression gets a little deeper and deeper as the advertising continues. It creates the feeling, when people want anything carried by that store, that that is a good place to go for it.

People like to deal with the things that are familiar. They enjoy meeting people they know better than strangers. When a store advertises regularly, it creates familiarity with its name. People feel acquainted with that store, they have an idea of the kind of service it gives, it becomes a business friend to serve them with the things they need, and they go there constantly.

SPRING FEVER

ALONG in the spring a feeling of unrest comes over the indoor people. It is partly a tired kind of languor from the approach of warmer weather, but still more it may be a discontent with one's daily task or surroundings. The great outdoors looks so enticing.

About now one feels like breaking all the customary habits quitting the job at the bench or in the home, and roaming far away. It is a kind of inheritance from the less fixed habits of the old days, in the times when people worked what hours they chose.

Fortunately our people's working time is not as long as it was a few years ago, and they get considerable time off in which they can roam around the country and enjoy sports and pastimes.

We may think we would like a life of idle roaming, but we should get tired of it quickly enough if we tried it. So our spring fever should not be permitted to dominate our whole mood.

THE JAZZ MUTINY

IT is to be hoped that the ghosts of the tarry-handed old British sailors of Nelson's day have not heard about the recent "mutiny," or whatever it was, on the British warship Royal Oak.

This affair developed, according to dispatches, when the captain refused to allow a jazz band to play aboard ship.

British naval vessels saw mutinies occasionally in the old days—but never over anything like that. The old-timers could put up with weevily bread, semi-rotten salt beef and vinegar-like lime juice for months at a time; they could endure things that modern Jack never imagines; and when they mutinied, it was a real mutiny. But a mutiny over a jazz band? The old-timers would pull down Davy Jones' locker in sheer dis-

Dolores Costello in "OLD SAN FRANCISCO" is a Warner Bros. picturization of this novel.

SYNOPSIS

Don Hernandez Vasquez and his beautiful granddaughter Dolores occupy the old Vasquez ranch overlooking San Francisco. The prosperity that came to San Francisco by the discovery of gold in California missed the Vasquez ranch where indolent ways did not keep abreast of modern progress. The ranch is coveted by Buckwell, San Francisco's political boss. His lawyer, Brandon, with Brandon's nephew, Terry, try to buy the ranch. Vasquez won't sell. Terry falls in love with Dolores. Buckwell, incensed by refusal, plans to void the old Vasquez land grant and evict Vasquez. Terry is furious and goes to learn Vasquez.

They both burst into merry laughter and Terry lost no time in presenting the remaining flower with due formality.

"Thank you," smiled Dolores shyly, pinning it in her hair with true Spanish artistry.

"I would like to bring you an arm full of American Beauties, their color is like your cheeks," Terry's admiration was making him surprisingly complimentary.

"It is strange that you came out here. I was wishing you would," confessed Dolores with winning frankness.

"You were? That's great, but why? Is anything wrong?" Terry suddenly remembered what had brought him to the ranch and his light hearted banter gave way to anxiousness.

"Grandfather is ill with worry about the ranch being taken away from him. We don't know what to do." Her great eyes were opened wide in perplexity.

Dolores did not have any hesitancy about confiding private trouble to Terry; by some miracle it seemed to make her feel better.

"That's a funny thing," exclaimed Terry, "I came out to try to help you because I was afraid your grandfather did not understand how grave the land grant situation is."

"Yes, I think he does, but he is unwilling to take advice from outsiders."

"I'm not an outsider," quickly objected Terry and Dolores just as quickly agreed. Neither of them realized how much they were taking for granted in so short a time, nor how strange their sympathetic loyalty would have sounded had anyone been there to hear.

"I am afraid Grandfather would not listen to a relative of Mr. Brandon's."

Startled at her own affront, Dolores clutched her throat in a futile effort to suppress the thing she had just said.

"Never mind," consoled Terry dolefully. "Then he regarded Dolores silently for what seemed to be a long time before adding, 'At least I will try and talk with him anyhow, and in case I fail I hope you will let me know if you need me.' Taking out a card he offered it to her.

"Thank you, Terry," she said gratefully. "I will," and she clutched the card without looking at it.

"That's a promise," Terry smiled and held out his hand.

Where Dolores' delicate fingers touched his palm he forgot about all promises but one, and that was the sacred vow that he hoped to make some day with her.

They were rudely recalled from their enjoyment of each other when Vasquez stalked out into the patio, coldly furious at seeing them together. Dolores pulled her hand from Terry's warm clasp and drew back anxiously, afraid of the impending outburst.

"Good afternoon, sir," greeted Terry, meeting the old man's eyes coolly.

"The same to you, Senor, and may I, as head of the house, inquire your business here?"

"To warn and help you, sir," Terry's eyes did not waver.

"Why should you infer that I require your help?" inquired Vasquez in stiff indignation.

"Please, Grandfather," quickly interposed Dolores, "allow him to speak!"

The old man looked from Terry to the beloved Granddaughter, whose hand rested on his shoulder in alarm. He had never been able to refuse anything that this only child of his only son asked of him.

"Very well," he acquiesced, bowing stiffly. "Come into the living room, Senor, and be comfortable."

The Latest in Things ELECTRICAL

What beautiful, artistic and utilitarian things electrical are produced nowadays for the American home! Hundreds of different designs of lamps and wall fixtures, ceiling lights and business desk brighteners which save the eyes and make the home or office more pleasing to look upon.

No more the old scramble for the one or two meagre lights in the sitting-room — an easy-chair and a companionable lamp for each and every member of the family.

Fine Meeting in Tarlton Church

The Woman's Foreign Missionary Society of the Circleville Group met Monday, April 23, in the M. E. church at Tarlton, with Mrs. John H. Dunlap of Williamsport, presiding.

The morning program was of a business nature with Mrs. Fred Beery of Brice, O., district corresponding secretary of Lancaster District, conducting a round table on plans for the year. Miss Helen Towson of Lancaster, district secretary of children's work, spoke briefly of the plans and devices used in the work among children in Lancaster District.

Miss Mary Porter, Tarlton, conducted a prayer and praise service, using for her scripture lesson the 6th chapter of Daniel, and offered prayer.

At the afternoon session, Mrs. Mack Noggle, Mrs. J. O. Eagleson and Mrs. John Dunlap gave a vocal trio.

Williamsport Auxiliary gave a clever playlet entitled, "Dr. Sure Cure Sees Through It."

Mrs. Charles Gerhardt, assisted by Miss Charlotte Phelps, Miss Carrie Johnson, Mrs. H. M. Crites, Mrs. Mack Noggle, and Mrs. J. O. Eagleson, gave a presentation of three-fold stewardship, entitled, "The Feast of Candles." A duet by Mrs. Noggle and Mrs. J. O. Eagleson was much enjoyed, and elicited a round of applause.

Miss Grace Hingsworth of Burma and India, but now living in Delaware, gave an inspiring talk telling many interesting things about her work in both India and Burma. She was born in India of English parents, and knows and loves those countries and their peoples. Miss Mary Thomas, on furlough from Sienyu, China, gave a short talk.

Large delegations from Circleville, Ashville, Williamsport, Atlanta, Hedges Chapel, Commercial Point and Pherson were in attendance, and the little church at Tarlton was filled.

ATTEND THE CIRCUS

Among the Circleville persons who went to Chillicothe Thursday to attend the Wallace-Hagenback circus were Mr. and Mrs. Ray Reid and daughter, Dorothy, Mr. and Mrs. Grover Pickens, Mrs. Thomas McManamy, Elliott Henry, Milton Friedman, Ed. Watson, Howard Greeno, Richard Denman, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Owens and children, Mrs. H. B. Given and daughter, Virginia, and son, Bish. Mr. and Mrs. Paul Reid, Mr. and Mrs. Karl Herrmann and daughter.

WILL HEAR CONCERT AT MEMORIAL HALL

Among those from Circleville who will go to Columbus to hear the concert at Memorial Hall Friday night will be Miss Anna

SOCIETY NEWS

Schleyer, Miss Abbe Clarke, Miss Helen Marion, Mr. and Mrs. Howard Orr, and Mr. and Mrs. Harry Heffner. This is the end of the season's series of major musical artists' concerts. Elizabeth Reiberg, Metropolitan Opera soprano, acclaimed one of the concert stage's greatest singers, will be heard in joint recital with Frances MacMillan. The artists are brought to Columbus by the Women's Music Club.

WILL HEAR CONCERT GIVEN BY COUSIN

Mayor and Mrs. E. T. Hedges of Circleville, and Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Herstein of Chillicothe, will compose a party to attend the concert at the Memorial Hall in Columbus Friday night. They are especially interested in this concert because the premier American violin virtuoso, Frances MacMillan, is a member of the Given family and a cousin of Mrs. Herstein and Mrs. Hedges.

WILL BE GUEST AT TEA AT MARAMOR

Miss Marie Hamilton of W. High-st., will be an out-of-town guest at a bridge tea given by Miss Mabel Galbreath, Saturday, at the Maramor in Columbus.

PRESBYTERIANS WILL ATTEND COLUMBUS DINNER

A number of members of the Presbyterian Church of Circleville will go to Columbus Friday night where they will attend the dinner at 6:30 o'clock at the Central Presbyterian church. This dinner will be a part of the Presbyterian Social Union of the Presbytery of Columbus, which includes Columbus, Circleville, Lancaster, Westerville, Plain City and Loudon.

Those who will be present from Circleville will be the Rev. and Mrs. Emil S. Toensmeier, Mr. and Mrs. N. G. Spangler, Mrs. Wilson Cellar, Mr. G. E. Hammell, Mr. C. E. Groce, Mr. Clark Will, Mr. A. C. Wilkes, Dr. D. V. Courtright, Mr. Edgar Barrere and Mr. and Mrs. Harry Stevenson.

WILL CELEBRATE HER BIRTHDAY

Mrs. Sarah E. Crow will celebrate her birthday anniversary Friday evening, with a family dinner party at her residence in "The Wellington" on S-Court-st.

MAY SEND GLEE CLUB TO STATE CONVENTION

The Business and Professional Women's club held its regular bi-monthly meeting Thursday night in the Chamber of Commerce rooms. The business consisted of the report of the committee nominating the persons for the election of officers at the next meeting.

The Business and Professional Women's club state convention will be held May 19 and 20, at Marietta. Plans to send the Glee club of the local organization to it, were discussed.

The program committee who had planned "a surprise" meeting, served a delicious and tempting lunch to all members present.

HEAR LAST CONCERT OF WOMEN'S CLUB

Another party from Circleville to hear the Elizabeth Reiberg and Frances MacMillan concert in Columbus Friday evening will include Mrs. Charles E. Groce, Mrs. Frank J. Bennett and Mrs. Clark Will.

TO HONOR ACTRESS OF "ST. CLAUDIA"

The members of the Young Married Ladies Bible Class of the Methodist Church will entertain Friday evening, with a supper at 7:00 o'clock in the social rooms. Their guests will be all the men who helped to make the religious drama "St. Claudia" so successful.

AT MARFIELD AND LEWIS PARTY

Beautiful pink roses and spring flowers, jonquils and tulips, were used as tasteful decorations Thursday, when Miss Harriett Marfield, Miss Mary Marfield and Mrs. Harry Lewis entertained with a luncheon-bridge at noon. The three prizes, one of which was a draw prize, were presented to Mrs. David S. Dunlap, Miss Sadie Brunner and Mrs. James Swearingen.

In pursuance of an Execution issued from the Clerk's office of the Court of Common Pleas of said County on the 15th day of April, 1928, and to me directed in the above entitled action, I will expose to public auction, on the premises of Martin Wittenman and Clara Wittenman, about two miles North of Commercial Point, Ohio, in the Township of Seelye in Franklin County, Ohio, on Friday, the 4th day of May, 1928, at 12 o'clock noon of said day, the following Goods and Chattels, to-wit: One Jersey cow, Mary; one Jersey cow, Dora; one Jersey cow, Daisy; one Jersey cow, Zilla; one Jersey cow, and 16 acres of growing corn. Property will be sold subject to prior liens.

Terms of Sale:—CASH.

Take notice that the property of Martin Wittenman and Clara Wittenman, as above described, is subject to execution in favor of Lena Wilkins.

Witness my hand and the seal of said Court at Franklin County, Ohio, this 15th day of April, 1928.

M. R. Allen, Attorney.

NATIONAL RACE IS WARMING UP

NEW YORK, April 27—With the league-leading New York Giants holding an advantage of only two games over the last-place Boston Braves, the National league race today is tighter than a 79-cent shirt after the first wash. This intriguing state of affairs was brought about yesterday when three second-division clubs, Boston, Philadelphia and Pittsburgh, defeated three first-division outfits—Brooklyn, New York and Cincinnati.

The feature event in the American league was Philadelphia's fifth straight win. After losing their first four games, the Athletics have jumped to third place.

Ed Brandt, southpaw obtained by the Boston Braves from Seattle, is beginning to stand out as one of the few pitching finds of the season. The big Dutchman held the Brooklyn Robins to a pair of measly singles yesterday and white-washed them 4 to 0. Dazzy Vance was the victim.

Influenza is keeping six members of the Braves out of the lineup. They are Hornsby, Robertson, Wertz, Bob Smith, John Cooney and Burrus.

The wallowing Waner boys led the attack with five hits between them as Pittsburgh battered Cincinnati to the tune of 7 to 2. Carmen Hill chalked up his first victory of the season.

Augie Walsh of Wildwood, N. J., obtained by the Phillies from Pittsburgh, Mass., held the Giants to five hits and beat them 5 to 4. Chick Thompson got four hits.

The wrecking crew of the New York Yankees put on a six-run rally in the eighth to trounce the Boston Red Sox, 9 to 4. Al Shealy, rookie pitcher, went the route for the winners, boosting the mound strength of the world's champions.

Cleveland stayed with the pace by swamping Detroit, 6 to 1. Young George Grant walked seven Detroit batters but stood for no nonsense in the pinches.

Cleveland is using Luis Fonseca at first base in place of George Burns, and the former Cincinnati second baseman has slammed out five hits in two games.

With all Washington gazing skyward for a sight of the German fliers, the Senators are fast burrowing toward the American League cellar. They suffered their fourth straight defeat in losing to the Athletics, 10 to 0, chiefly as a result of the efforts of three of baseball's oldest veterans. Old Jack Quinn's spitball worked perfectly and Daddy Tris Speaker and Grandpa Ty Cobb each drove in three runs.

Blue and Schulte each hit a home run as the St. Louis Browns nosed out the White Sox, 6 to 5.

The Cardinals and the Cubs did not play.

ENGLISH CHAMP GETS

EARLY LEAD ON HAGEN

HERTFORDSHIRE, Eng., April 27—Archie Compston, crack English professional, sprang the sensation of the 1928 golf season here today by reeling off a miracle 32 in the first nine holes of his $5,000 match with Walter Hagen, the world's greatest match player.

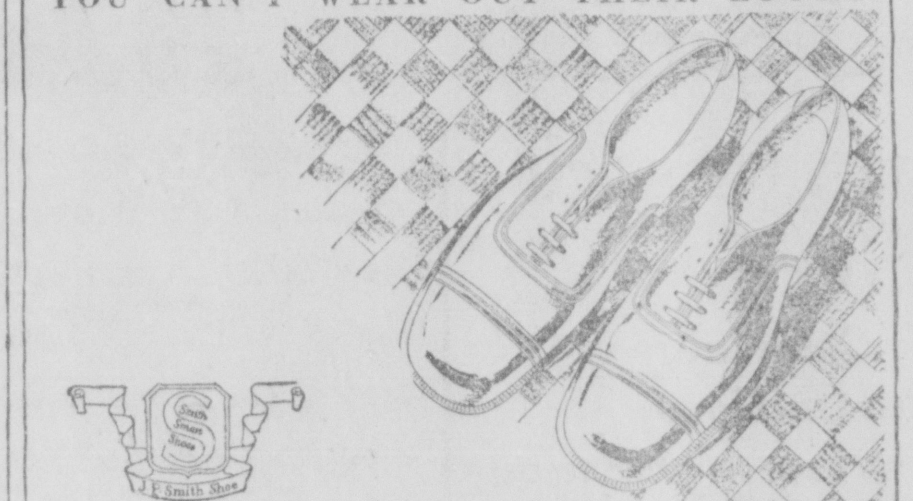

Compston kept up his marvelous playing until he reached the "unlucky thirteenth," when he took a six and the American won his first hole of the match. At this juncture the British star was five up on Hagen. He had taken only 47 for the thirteen holes.

SPORTSMATTER

BY FRANK GETTY

Tom Heeney arrives from England, the most disappointing challenger for the heavyweight championship of the world since Frank Moran shook "Mary Ann" at big Jess Willard.

The New Zealander simply cannot create the impression that he has a chance to defeat Gene Tunney. In fact, as far as Tom's attitude is concerned, one never would guess that he has that intention.

Yet Heeney has a much better chance than he realizes. Tunney looks to me to be slow and stout. There have been heavyweight champions ere this who have been in that condition and still retained their titles, but they placed the credit elsewhere.

Tunney, it must be admitted, has three months in which to work himself into a fine frenzy of fighting form. The champion undoubtedly will point for speed in his preparations for the downfall of Tom Heeney. It will be speed and boxing skill upon which Gene will rely in his next defense of the heavyweight title.

The New Zealander is slow, and by a moderate effort Tunney can look so much faster than Tom that he is certain to catch the judges' eye.

A display of speed, and even moderate boxing skill, however, is not always sufficient to win a prize fight. And when the heavyweight championship of the world, with all its golden accessories, is at stake, any bout becomes a prize fight despite all Mr. Tunney's erudition. A fighter who pits his trade but three times in two years loses something which the other fellow has. Heeney has it.

There is small doubt that if Tom's hand were to be raised at the end of the fifteen round next July, the New Zealander blacksmith would keel over in a faint. Least of anyone can Heeney picture himself the heavyweight champion of the world and a millionaire. He undoubtedly would be embarrassed to have to return to the Antipodes in any such condition. Probably he would not dare to show his battle-scarred face in Auckland. Instead, he would go to Paris and invest heavily in silk shirts.

Meanwhile, a couple of battlers entirely lacking in Heeney's inferiority complex, as well as in his fighting heart, are preparing to exhibit themselves to the public gaze, for gold, next Monday night.

Jack Sharkey of Boston, who always will attract the curiosity of a certain element of the boxing fraternity which cannot, simply cannot, believe he can be that bad, announces the impending massacre of Jack Delaney of Bridgeport.

Sharkey says he lost to Dempsey, Heeney and Risko because of bad advice.

"They told me to box 'em," wails the ex-tar. "I wanted to fight but they kept telling me to box."

"This time I'm going to fight, and you will see the finish of this baby Delaney just as you did of Jimmy Maloney and others I have taken."

To all of which, Delaney replies not a word, but folds his right hand meaningfully.

Post Writer Lauds Harry Weldon As Most Famous Sporting Editor

Harry M. Weldon, a former resident of Circleville and father of Mrs. Charles T. Gilmore, of South Court street, is mentioned in a recent issue of the Saturday Evening Post as "The Dean of Cincinnati and perhaps the most famous sporting editor in the United States."

The author is Hugh Fullerton, and the article is entitled, "The Fellows Who Made the Game." The entire story tells of what an important part sport writers play in the fame of base ball players.

Harry Weldon, after his education acquired in Circleville, went to Wooster, O. When he returned, he became a reporter on The Union-Herald here.

Later, through Allen O. Myers, also a newspaper writer, he accepted a position as baseball reporter on The Cincinnati Enquirer. Myers was a writer for that paper under the name "Pickaway." In a short time Mr. Weldon became the sporting editor of The Enquirer, and it is of

KERNS SAYS HE HASN'T GIVEN UP

NEW YORK, April 27—Jack Kearns is far from downhearted over his "Kayo" by Jack Dempsey in the courts. The former manager of the ex-champion says he has just begun to fight and will shortly file another suit against Dempsey besides carrying the old one to the higher courts.

"That decision favored me more than it did Dempsey," said Kearns today. "The jury ruled that our contract was binding. I can prove that it was not terminated in 1925. I intend to go after Dempsey again."

"I'll make things hot for Rickard, too. I'll tell plenty that he doesn't want anybody to hear."

NATIONAL RACE IS WARMING UP

NEW YORK, April 27—With the league-leading New York Giants holding an advantage of only two games over the last-place Boston Braves, the National league race today is tighter than a 79-cent shirt after the first wash. This intriguing state of affairs was brought about yesterday when three second-division clubs, Boston, Philadelphia and Pittsburgh, defeated three first-division outfits—Brooklyn, New York and Cincinnati.

The feature event in the American league was Philadelphia's fifth straight win. After losing their first four games, the Athletics have jumped to third place.

Ed Brandt, southpaw obtained by the Boston Braves from Seattle, is beginning to stand out as one of the few pitching finds of the season. The big Dutchman held the Brooklyn Robins to a pair of measly singles yesterday and white-washed them 4 to 0. Dazzy Vance was the victim.

Influencing is keeping six members of the Braves out of the lineup: They are Hornsby, Robertson, Wertz, Bob Smith, John Cooney and Burris.

The wallowing Waner boys led the attack with five hits between them as Pittsburgh battered Cincinnati to the tune of 7 to 2. Carmen Hill chalked up his first victory of the season.

Augie Walsh of Wildwood, N. J., obtained by the Phillies from Pittsburgh, Mass., held the Giants to five hits and beat them 5 to 4. Chick Thompson got four hits.

The wrecking crew of the New York Yankees put on a six-run rally in the eighth to trounce the Boston Red Sox, 9 to 4. Al Shealy, Rookie pitcher, went the route for the winners, boosting the mound strength of the world's champions.

Cleveland stayed with the pace by swamping Detroit, 6 to 1. Young George Grant walked seven Detroit batters but stood for no nonsense in the pinches.

Cleveland is using Luis Fonseca at first base in place of George Burns, and the former Cincinnati second baseman has slammed out five hits in two games.

With all Washington gazing skyward for a sight of the German fliers, the Senators are fast burrowing toward the American League cellar. They suffered their fourth straight defeat in losing to the Athletics, 10 to 0, chiefly as a result of the efforts of three of baseball's oldest veterans. Old Jack Quinn's spitball worked perfectly, and Daddy Tris Speaker and Grandpa Ty Cobb each drove in three runs.

Blue and Schulte each hit a home run as the St. Louis Browns won out of the White Sox, 6 to 5.

The Cardinals and the Cubs did not play.

ENGLISH CHAMP GETS

EARLY LEAD ON HAGEN HERTFORDSHIRE, Eng., April 27—Archie Compston, crack English professional, sprang the sensation of the 1928 golf season here today by reeling off a miracle 32 in the first nine holes of his $5,000 match with Walter Hagen, the world's greatest match player. Compston kept up his marvelous playing until he reached the "unlucky thirteenth," when he took a six and the American won his first hole of the match. At this juncture the British star was five up on Hagen. He had taken only 47 for the thirteen holes.

SPORTSMATTER

BY FRANK GETTY
CINCINNATI, OHIO, APRIL 27, 1929

Tom Heeney arrives from England, the most disappointing challenger for the heavyweight championship of the world since Frank Moran shock "Mary Ann" at big Jess Willard.

The New Zealander simply cannot create the impression that he has a chance to defeat Gene Tunney. In fact, as far as Tom's attitude is concerned, one never would guess that he has that intention.

Yet Heeney has a much better chance than he realizes. Tunney looks to me to be slow and stout. There have been heavyweight champions on this who have been in that condition and still retained their titles, but they placed the credit elsewhere.

Tunney, it must be admitted, has three months in which to work himself into a fine frenzy of fighting form. The champion undoubtedly will point for speed in his preparations for the downfall of Tom Heeney. It will be speed and boxing skill upon which Gene will rely in his next defense of the heavyweight title.

The New Zealander is slow, and by a moderate effort Tunney can look so much faster than Tom that he is certain to catch the judges' eye.

A display of speed, and even moderate boxing skill, however, is not always sufficient to win a prize fight. And when the heavyweight championship of the world, with all its golden accessories, is at stake, any hand becomes a prize fight despite all Mr. Tunney's erudition. A fighter who picks his trade but three times in two years loses something which the other fellow has. Heeney has it.

There is small doubt that if Tom's hand were to be raised at the end of the fifteen round next July, the New Zealander blacksmith would feel over in a faint. Least of anyone can Heeney picture himself the heavyweight champion of the world and a millionaire. He undoubtedly would be embarrassed to have to return to the Antipodes in any such condition. Probably he would not dare to show his battle-scarred face in Auckland. Instead, he would go to Paris and invest heavily in silk shirts.

Meanwhile, a couple of battlers entirely lacking in Heeney's inferiority complex, as well as in his fighting heart, are preparing to exhibit themselves to the public gaze, for gold, next Monday night.

Jack Sharkey of Boston, who always will attract the curiosity of a certain element of the boxing fraternity which cannot, simply cannot, believe he can be that bad, announces the impending massacre of Jack Delaney of Bridgeport.

Sharkey says he lost to Dempsey, Heeney and Risko because of bad advice.

"They told me to box 'em," wails the ex-far. "I wanted to fight but they kept telling me to box."

"This time I'm going to fight, and you will see the finish of this baby Delaney just as you did of Jimmy Maloney and others I have taken."

To all of which, Delaney replies not a word, but folds his right hand meaningfully.

Post Writer Lauds Harry Weldon As Most Famous Sporting Editor

Harry M. Weldon, a former resident of Circleville and father of Mrs. Charles T. Gilmore, of South Court street, is mentioned in a recent issue of the Saturday Evening Post as "The Dean of Cincinnati and perhaps the most famous sporting editor in the United States." The author is Hugh Fullerton, and the article is entitled, "The Fellows Who Made the Game." The entire story tells of what an important part sport writers play in the fame of base ball players.

Harry Weldon, after his education acquired in Circleville, went to Wooster, O. When he returned, he became a reporter on The Union-Herald here.

Later, through Allen O. Myers, also a newspaper writer, he accepted a position as baseball reporter on The Cincinnati Enquirer. Myers was a writer for that paper under the name "Pickaway." In a short time Mr. Weldon became the sporting editor of The Enquirer, and it is of his work in this capacity that the story in The Post, speaks of him as the "Most famous sporting editor in the United States."

He left Circleville in 1880 and spent most of his time in Cincinnati until his death in 1902.

KERNS SAYS HE HASN'T GIVEN UP

NEW YORK, April 27 — Jack Kearns is far from downhearted over his "Kayo" by Jack Dempsey in the courts. The former manager of the ex-champion says he has just begun to fight and will shortly file another suit against Dempsey besides carrying the old one to the higher courts.

"That decision favored me more than it did Dempsey," said Kearns today. "The jury ruled that our contract was binding. I can prove that it was not terminated in 1925. I intend to go after Dempsey again."

"I'll make things hot for Rickard, too. I'll tell plenty that he doesn't want anybody to hear."

Even Mother Could NOT KEEP LOCKHART FROM SPEEDING

LOS ANGELES, April 27 — Frank Lockhart's zeal to reign supreme in the speed world could be softened by nothing, not even the anxious pleas of his mother.

This was disclosed here today as preparations began for the burial of the Los Angeles youth who was hurled to his death at Daytona Beach yesterday in an attempt to shatter the world's automobile speed record.

"I begged him to stop trying for records," said Mrs. Carrie Lockhart, mother of Frank. "I told him it could end only one way. And—well, it has."

The news of Lockhart's death prostrated his mother with grief. She is employed as a seamstress here, but her sewing machine is idle today.

Two frail women not husky thief after chase

CHICAGO, April 27 — Two frail women, one of them a grandmother and both weighing less than 100 pounds, were credited today with capturing a husky male burglar.

William Stanard, 37, of Amboy, Ill., the alleged burglar, was seen fleeing from the basement apartment of Mrs. Fel Mockus.

The latter gave chase and tossed the burglar for a temporary loss. As the burglar fought her off, Mrs. Jessie Moxon, a 90-pound grandmother came on the scene. The burglar fled up an alley with the grandmother in pursuit.

It proved to be a "blind" alley, with no outlet. Mrs. Moxon succeeded in cornering her quarry there until masculine help arrived.

SCIENTISTS SAY MEN LIVED HERE MILLION YEARS

WASHINGTON, April 28.—Man probably has lived on the American continent upwards of a million years, according to recent discoveries made by Smithsonian Institute scientists.

Information indicating that man may have come to America in the Pleistocene or Glacial Age, has been obtained by a Smithsonian party working at Melbourne, Fla., under the direction of Dr. J. W. Gidley.

"Controversy as to the age of man in America has raged for decades and has been particularly active in recent years," said Dr. Gidley. "Additional facts pointing to man's early residence, obtained during the work just concluded, substantiates the firm belief of myself and other paleontologists that man really existed on this continent during the Pleistocene."

Remains Found
In 1916, according to a statement issued by Smithsonian Dr. E. H. Sellards, at the time state geologist of Florida, discovered human remains at Vero, Fla., associated with fossil bones of animals known only in the Pleistocene. Later an amateur collector made discoveries of similar remains at Melbourne and in 1925 the Amherst-Smithsonian expedition found a human skull in what were considered Pleistocene beds.

There were three principal geological strata in the area in question. The bones at Vero and Melbourne were found in the middle stratum in beds definitely considered of the Pleistocene. The question whether these bones were deposited in the middle strata at a later date or whether they were deposited there originally was studied carefully by the new expedition.

State Agricultural Agent Tells Of Institutional Farms

J. D. Bragg, state agricultural agent gave an address before the Circleville Rotary club members Thursday noon concerning the state institutional farms.

Mr. Bragg made it clear that the products of the farms do not support the institutions as many now believe. The products of these farms are wholly consumed in the institutions, and nothing is sold except an occasional purebred bull calf for which they have no use.

In answer to the question, "Do institutional farms pay?" Mr. Bragg said: "Institutional farms are paying larger dividends to the state of Ohio than almost any business at the present time is paying to its owners or stockholders."

"In the state of Ohio there are 21 institutions with a population of over 27,000 wards. Nearly four times the number of men, women, and children in Circleville."

"Of the many enterprises in which the institutions engage the vegetable gardening is the largest. Gardening of this nature requires much labor of which there is an abundance in the institution."

Inmates of the institutions are given employment according to the capacity of work they are best fitted for. As many as fifty men work on a small garden at a time and in the words of Mr. Bragg, "some cultivate, some hoe, some pull weeds and others make believe."

Dairying, hog raising and the care of flowers in the institutions greenhouses are engaged in and have proved very profitable to the institutions in that they lower the tremendous upkeep.

Mr. Bragg outlined briefly the agricultural program for the future in the following:

To produce enough vegetables on each farm to supply the needs of all inmates or patients.

To grow enough pork to consume all waste from the kitchens and dining rooms and in addition to this enough to supply the needs of all institutions for pork and pork products.

To produce enough fruit, large and small, for the entire needs of the institutions.

To produce enough milk to supply the needs for whole milk, butter, buttermilk and skimmilk.

To produce enough surplus on the large acreage farms to supply the institutions without acreage to supply their needs.

Value of Fever

Fever is a means of defense. Instead of the height of the temperature marking the virulence of disease, or of its causes, it is a measure of the reactive power of the body. The more vigorous and vital the body is the higher will the fever run. And usually the higher the fever goes the less will be the danger and the more rapid will be the recovery.—Physical Culture Magazine.

FIVE KILLED AS TRAIN HITS AUTO

COSHOCKTON, April 27 — Five of six persons in a passenger automobile, struck last night by a Pennsylvania passenger train at Conesville, were killed, four of them instantly.

The dead are Mrs. Charles Lepley, her daughter, Mrs. Gertrude Lepley, and two children of the latter, Jack, aged 4, and Sarah Jane, aged 7, and Mrs. Sidney Turner, all of Coshocton.

Mrs. Turner was alive when rescued, but died as she arrived at the City Hospital here.

The crossing at which the accident occurred is in the business section of the village. No crossing watchman is on duty after 4 p. m. bourne were found in the middle stratum in beds definitely considered of the Pleistocene. The question whether these bones were deposited in the middle strata at a later date or whether they were deposited there originally was studied carefully by the new expedition. Gidley found to his own satisfaction that the human bones were placed in the Pleistocene stratum as it was being formed.

Fixing The Time

Digging into the Pleistocene stratum the expedition found such remains of man as bone awls, arrow heads and pieces of pottery. The animal remains found near appeared to have been of the late Glacial Age. The investigators considered that it would have been impossible for the human relics to have been pushed down from higher strata without leaving a trace.

"The human skull which we found at Melbourne inn 1925 in the Ice Age strata was imbedded solidly in the sand," Gidley said. "We now say positively therefore, that the human remains belong in this strata and they could not have been inserted later."

"Further to give strong support of these conclusions we found an arrow head made by human hands near the middle of the Ice Age stratum and a few feet from the fossil bones of a Pleistocene mastodon."

The same general geological conditions were found to exist at Melbourne and Vero.

According to Smithsonian experts the Pleistocene age existed from 100,000 to 1,000,000 years ago.
